Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"About a year ago, I had a severe attack of Influenza, which left me very weak, without energy, appe-tite, or interest in life. Obtaining little or no relief from doctors, or from the many remedles recom-mended to me, I finally tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and from that time, began to gain health and strength, continued the treatment until fully recovered, and now have very great pleasure in telling my friends of the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and the happy results of its use. I consider it the best blood-purifier

The Tree Killer.

One of the enrious forest growths of the isthmus of Panama and lower Central America in general is the vins which the Spaniards call matapalo, or "tree killer." This vine first starts in life as a climber upon the trunks of the large trees, and, owing to its marvelously rapid growth, soon reaches the lower branches. At this point it first begins to put out its "feelers"—tender, harmless looking root shoots, which soon reach the ground and become as farmly fixed as the parent stem. These hundreds of additional sap tubes give the whole vine a renewed lease of life, and it begins to send out its nerial tendrils in all directions. These intwine themselves tightly around every limb of the tree, oven creeping to the very farthermost tips and squeezing the life out of both bark and leaf. Things go on at this rate but a short while before the forest giant is compelled to succumb to the gigantic parasite which is sapping its life's blood. Within a very few years the tree rots and falls away, leaving the massapalo standing creet and hollow, like a monster vegetable devilfish lying upon its back with its horrid tentacles clasped together high in the air. Morgan, "Central America Afoot," says, "Corelike arbors of matapalo are to be seen in all directions, each testifying to the lingering death of some sylvan giant that formerly supported it."—St. Louis Renablic. The Tree Killer.

Cox & Son, druggists, Marahfield, Oregon, No one afflicted with a throat or lung trouble can use this remedy without praising it. It always gives prompt relief. It is especially valuable for colds as it relieves the lungs, makes breathing easier and aids expectoration.
